

Thomas Bagger

Currently Deputy head of the political section at the German Embassy in Washington D.C., Thomas Bagger previously served at German missions in Ankara/Turkey (2002-2006) and in Prague/Czech Republic (1996-98). From 1998-2002 he held the position of speechwriter for then-Foreign minister Joschka Fischer.

He joined the diplomatic service in 1992 after two years as a research associate at SWP, Germany's premier international affairs think tank. Mr. Bagger holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from Munich University and an M.A. in International Relations from the University of Maryland at College Park, where he was a Fulbright student in 1989/1990. Military service from 1984-1986.

Born in Lueneburg, Lower Saxony, Germany, on 21 October 1965. Married, three children.